

CRN website to be redesigned in summer!

CRN is now redesigning its website! We would like to introduce you to some of the new features:

Easily find the resources you are looking for!

Content has been categorized in theme-based sections, so you can easily go to the sections of your interest, and find resources there. Here are the categories:

Projects

ECEC around the world, Children with special needs, Brain and Education, Child Science and the Great Japan Earthquake

Papers and Essays

Parenting, Pregnancy and Prenatal Care, School and teachers, After-School and Community Activities, Playing and learning, Children in the digital age, Language Development and Education, Multicultural Education, Health and medical issues, and Children's rights and Well-being

There is a special section for Director's Blog, CRN Events and Publications, too.

A search function will enable you to search for an article by a specific keyword or author's name within the CRN website.

Actively participate in discussion by posting your comments!

CRN and its philosophy of Child Science are based on the idea that specialists in all fields need to engage in dialogue to solve the problems of children. The new website has added a comment function for each article so you can participate in discussions. We look forward to an active response from our readers worldwide.

We will also add links to social networks like Facebook and Twitter. In this way, we aim to create lively discussion through the social networks, too!

I hope you enjoy our redesigned website!
